wan was strolling, or rather, nging up Broadway the other afteriona, writes a New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch, He had high check bones, black hair and wore moccasins. He had no overcoat and the collar of his thin sack coat was turned up about his neck and held with a hand blue with cold. Three men standing at the curb saw the man and noted his moccasined feet. "By George," said one, "there's a bit of luck. Go after him, Tony, and tell him to come over to the studio. He's down on his luck and we need an In-Tony pursued the shivering figure and told him about the chance at the studio. "Sure, I'll come," said the alleged redskin. "I look like one, but my name is Schwartz. A fellow gave me these moccasins, and I'd be willing to wear a chief's hat and a red blanket if it would keep me warm." And so another Indian went straight to the "movies."

Bonus System in Japan.

The highest salaried man in Japan does not receive enough money in that water. But, as the air contains much form to pay for gasoline used by his automobile, for salaries of the managers of business corporations are insignificantly small, says the Japan Times. Salaries, however, are not the total income of business men. Under the Japanese custom there is a liberal bonus system, and the bonus amounts to 300 or 400 times the monthly salary in some cases.

The Mitsui company is regarded as the biggest corporation in Japan and their directors are noted for their large incomes. Each director is said to receive in the form of a bonus about $100,000 a year, although his salary may be only $250 a month.

LAD LIVES ALONE IN WILDERNESS

High School Graduate Enjoys Ex pericnce as Houseboat Caretaker for Hunting Club.

Neenah, Wis .- Living alone in the midst of a marshland wilderness, skiff and shotgun inaulmate companions and with only occasional week-end visits to home and civilization, has been the experience of Wilbur Haertl. son of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Haertl of this city, who recently emerged from his primitive existence.

Young Haertl, who is a graduate of the Neengh high school and is enrolled in a school of engraving in Chicago, donned the huntsman's garb several weeks ago and since that time has fulfilled the duties of caretaker of the housebont owned by the Buck

Ready for an Opening Crack at the

Up club, located on the banks of the "cut" in the heart of the Lake Poygan marshes, the most famous wild-fowling region in the United States.

An ardent sportsman, Haertl was glad of the opportunity to transform his favorite pastime into the business of living. Hunters who make flying trips of one or two days' duration to the duck grounds do not experience the utter sense of loneliness and iselation which comes with a day in and day out existence in such a manner.

To communicate with the outer world, young Haertl was obliged to paddle several miles to the nearest farmhouse and telephone. Often, of course, he came in contact with hunting and fishing parties, but these were mere fleeting gimpses, and for the most part the sensation is one of soli-

As the "simple life" and "back-tonature" experiment, Haertl's marshland home was a success. He retired early, usually about 7:30, shortly after the evening flight; was up long before daylight, boited hot coffee and bread for breakfast, and by the time the sun peeped over the top of the waying rice was ensconced in suitable covering and ready for an opening tiful cook book. It is sent free to crack at the ducks.

Strange as it may seem to the uninitiated, there was not the monetony connected with this mode of living that one would expect, and when Wilbur left his floating abode for good it was with regret.
